Drive Off the Main Road for Joy of Motoring and Novel Scenes Suggests Buick Sales Manager

By C. W. CHURCHILL
 General Sales Manager Buick Motor Company

The increased attention given to the subject of comfort, in current motor car models, opens new vistas of enjoyment to the motorist who loves the outdoors.

Winding dirt roads possess a charm which is very keen, and which more and more city dwellers are learning to appreciate every year. To follow such a road is to escape the tedium of the main traveled route, with its unbroken procession of cars, its ever-present refreshment stands, and its many other reminders of the matter-of-fact world which we like to forget on our weekend drives.

How often, in driving along the main highway, do we catch a glimpse of alluring scenery, as we flash past the exit from one of these roads! Our imagination is stimulated by the very suddenness with which it twists from sight, after revealing just enough of its tree-arched loveliness to rouse desire. There is always the temptation, at such times, to turn back and pursue the beckoning unknown, and we are seldom disappointed if we yield.

The network formed by these unimportant roads is more extensive than the main highway system itself, yet to date so few have discovered them that they are all but deserted, even on Sundays. They are a new and unknown world, ours for exploring. And they are well worth exploration. They offer a diversity of scenery, and a contact with elemental things, which are all the more enjoyable because different from our everyday experience.

Attractive farmhouses, set in spacious lawns, abound; yet now and then we come upon a deserted homestead whose mouldering decay is a vivid reminder of other days. Such contrasts bring home forcibly the change a generation has wrought in rural life, and pursuing the thought we realize that the motor car, which penetrates these hidden places so easily today, has contributed enormously to their emancipation.

For fullest enjoyment, the explorer should be leisurely. Dirt roads are not adapted to fast travel. To begin with, they make no pretense of offering the shortest route between two points. They go out of their way for geographical obstructions in a manner maddening to one in a hurry—now skirting the base of a sprawling hill, now meandering beside a brook, and now, with entire inconsistency, charging straight up the steepest slope in sight.

They are generally far from smooth—a point of minor importance in these days of comfortable motor cars, least of all to the driver who goes slowly in order to prolong his enjoyment. They disregard completely the man who likes his grades medium or rare. They plunge abruptly up and down; they waste an amazing amount of space doubling back upon themselves; and wide bridges, banked turns and warning signs are practically unknown.

Now is this the whole case against the back roads, from the viewpoint of the man in a hurry. They are frequently so narrow that passing becomes difficult. This characteristic presents no objections to the driver who follows them from choice. Rather it augments their charm, making for interchange of courtesies reminiscent of horse-and-buggy days. One driver must pull aside to let the other pass. On country roads, even today, this act usually earns a "thank you," an acknowledgment which, falling on unaccustomed city ears, is often alone enough to make the trip worth while.

There is something of the explorer in each of us, and to that something the unknown roads beckon irresistibly. Glimpses of yellow pumpkins among the shocked corn, of trumpet vines festooning an abandoned farmhouse, or ripe fruit littering the roadside under loaded trees, are only a few of the rewards awaiting the explorer in Autumn. Winding little dirt roads are almost everywhere, and given a car he can just take them as they come, smooth or rough, level or hilly, with the same eagerness and the same ease, the motorist who seeks them out will be more than amply repaid.

Long Beach Elks Will Stage Huge Charity Circus

Industrial Show and Benefit Will Open on October 29

LONG BEACH—Long Beach Elks are planning the greatest charity effort in the life of Lodge No. 888 with their circus and industrial show to be held Oct. 29-30.

Proceeds of circus and show will go to the Lodge's fund for dispensing Christmas cheer to homes where otherwise it might not appear. Each year the Elks do this work, and always with absolute secrecy, so that not even the members of the lodge, except those on the committee charged with the duty, know where and has been given. The big tent which will cover the show and circus, each taking half, will be 150 x 200 feet at Alhambra avenue and Broadway, Long Beach. The color scheme for the industrial section will be the purple-and-white of Elkdom. There will be eighty-eight booths in this section, of which twenty-four will be occupied by the automobile exhibit.

Of the circus itself, the Elks promise a real old-time affair, with the best of professional talent, drolliest of clowns, a genuine menagerie, side shows, concessions, red lemonade and everything to be expected as an accessory of the sawdust arena.

One hundred and fifty thousand tickets already have been sold, and business men and citizens of Long Beach generally are backing up the Elks in their effort to make the event the amusement feature of the year.

Exalted Ruler Stanley Hess has named Arthur B. Cheroske, chairman of the general circus and show committee, and J. Strachan is chairman of the finance committee. Fred A. Watkins is general counsel. Ben J. Dooley is chairman of the ticket sales committee.
